HARDEN'S RETRIAL DELAYED.

It Is Due to the Sickness of the Editor of Die Zukunft.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The prosecution of Maximilian Harden, editor of Die Zukunft, by Count Kuno von Moltke, who is attempting to vindicate himself from the accusations brought out during the previous hearing of the Harden-Von Moltke case has been postponed until next Thursday because Harden is too ill to appear in court. The case will now be taken up by state's attorney and he heard before a criminal bench of five judges. The trial had been set for yesterday.

The train he rode on stopped at a station and failed to start when the engineer opened the throttle. There was an examination of the parts and a retarding of the throttle which gave the same result but left the mystery unexplained. During the delay the passengers alighted and learned that the engine just wouldn't go. Finally in despair, another locomotive was ordered by wire. While they waited one of the passengers who had "interested" himself in the case said to the conductor, "Why your brakes are set."

That the employees are always on the lookout for trouble to such an extent that the mere anticipation hinders the performance of their duties is illustrated by the following incident, witnessed by a clergyman, who tells the story.

The train he rode on stopped at a station and failed to start when the engineer opened the throttle. There was an examination of the parts and a retarding of the throttle which gave the same result but left the mystery unexplained. During the delay the passengers alighted and learned that the engine just wouldn't go. Finally in despair, another locomotive was ordered by wire. While they waited one of the passengers who had "interested" himself in the case said to the conductor, "Why your brakes are set."

Sure enough! The information was conveyed to the engineer. He released his air and tried the throttle again. The train moved off at its usual gait.
